JOE'S TURTLE SOUP TRIUMPH OF CHEFS SKILL

Joseph Hartley, genial Clerk of Will County proved himself to be the Chef DeLuxe when he prepared a very tasty turtle soup which was served at the Republican picnic held at Rivals Park on the Kankakee River last Saturday afternoon and evening. Mr. Hartley is noted for his tasty dish and when the picnic was being planned the first thought of the committee on arrangements was to have Mr. Hartley act as Chef.

Joseph Hartley

The picnic was attended by employees of the Court House and the precinct committeemen, workers and their families. Senator R. J. Barr also was present. The Rivals Park is an ideal spot for an outing. The weather was perfect and all attending enjoyed a most delightful time.

County Clerk Joseph Hartley received the following very interesting letter recently from Floyd E. Arnett, a Joliet World War veteran.

Dear Friend Joe: Sorry to not have fulfilled my promise in sending you that salmon I promised you but as you see I have been getting around. We are building a second Pearl Harbor out here in the Alutian Islands and I had to be on hand to put my oar in.

I am holding down the softest job here, compressor operator. I have been up here for the past three months and I am really drawing some pretty good money. I guess Joliet also is experiencing a boom, somewhat due to the national defense work.

Things in general on the Pacific Coast are the best they have been for a long time. Say this place would be the place for you to live. Here's why. The herring here are so thick that the boats moving around churn them up by the thousands. If it were not for the ravens, sea gulls and eagles it certainly would smell terrible. There are quite a number of salmon, halibut, seals and killer whales present in the water here about also. No game whatever on the Alutian Islands except Kodiak Island which is near the mainland and is quite large. There is the home of the Kodiak bear. Up here we have about two months of good weather and the rest in rain, snow and winds that are sometimes strong enough to blow you off your feet. I have actually worked in winds as high as 96 miles per hour with the rain and snow almost cutting the eyes out of your head.

I do not expect to stay up here this winter. Will leave in November. Inside of a week after you get this letter you should get your salmon. Good luck to you and hope you and the family enjoy the fish.

Mr. Hartley received an 18 lb. Salmon by prepaid express a week after receiving the above letter.

A Trip To Uno

It was hot that day when we left for Uno. The temperature was hovering just under the 100 mark and had been doing the same thing for almost two weeks. We had read all about the cool north woods where you can always sleep and where hay fever is unknown. It was almost 5 o'clock in the evening when we left and the wind coming into the car felt as though some giant furnace was open and drawing our car into it.

We pressed on, always thinking of those cool woods and wondering if it were possible to have to sleep under blankets. After several hours of torture, the sun began to set as we continued northward. We were now into Wisconsin. Past Milwaukee and as the air had cooled somewhat we decided to go on take advantage of the night air. Soon we saw the lights of Fond du Lac and decided to stop there overnight.

The next morning we left Fond du Lac early to get as far north as possible to escape the terrific heat. On and on we went, always north, thru Green Bay and Marinette, Wisconsin and across the bridge into Menominee, Michigan, which calls itself the gateway to vacationland. From there the country started to change. We had seen a number of pines but now we were starting to see a birch now and then and the air was getting cooler in fact driving was really comfortable.

We were now going northeast riding along the shores of Green Bay. We soon saw the city of Escanaba which in Indian means "flat rock." There we saw the "rushing Escanaba" of Longfellow's Hiawatha. This is the city where each spring they hold the Smelt Jamboree, those shiny little fish coming from the lake into the many streams to spawn. They are literally scooped out by the millions and sent all over the country to various sportsmen's and civic groups. Tons upon tons of smelt are frozen and stored in huge lakes. These help to make furs at a local mink farm.

We liked Escanaba because we felt that we had finally arrived in the north even tho we were to continue on.

We found by consulting our maps that we were well into the upper peninsula which has shoreline on three of the Great Lakes, Superior on the north, Michigan on the south and Huron on the east.

We left Escanaba on scenic route 2 which follows Lake Michigan from Escanaba to the Straits of Mackinac. We found the friendly little village of Nahma with its wooden sidewalks and its large lumber mill and decided to spend the night there. It is here that each summer the Nahma Vacation School for outdoor writers and photographers is held. It is also known for its famous hunter shindig held just before hunting season each fall. We enjoyed our stay in Nahma very much, especially under the guidance of Mr. Johnson of the lumber company who took us through the mill and told of the history of that country and of the problems of converting a tree into lumber for your home and mine.

The next day we went straight north of Nahma and decided to go about half way to Lake Superior into the Hiawatha National Forest and see what we could find. After all we came to see the north woods and to see it as nature left it, we must leave the main roads. We found a winding gravel road which we found took us immediately away from so called civilization into the forest. After several miles the gravel ended and we found ourselves on an old sand road which if viewed from the air must look like a rope that had been thrown into the air and allowed to remain in the same position in which it fell. Back and forth we went thru the most beautiful forest we had ever seen. Suddenly as we rounded one of the many turns there was right before our eyes a deer who was apparently as astonished as we were. She gave us one look and bounded off with great flying leaps into the thick woods. If you have never seen a sight like this, you have missed something. We realized we must really be in God's country because as we went on we saw the same sight more often.

By now we thought we must be about half way to Lake Superior and decided to start looking for a place to stay. We soon came upon a sign which read "Uno Lodge 1 Mile." We turned into the lane and at the end we found a quaint old log building with the roof coming to a point from all sides. We stopped in and were given a hearty welcome as there is seldom anybody who ventures into those parts except those who come here year after year and the few folks there seemed to be glad to have visitors. We were introduced around and there we met "The Judge."

He is a kindly man of about 80 years with a chuckle in his voice and all about him he carries an air of sagacity. He saw to it that we were made comfortable and as we sat before the fireplace (it was delightfully cool there), he told us stories of the old days at Uno. He explained how years ago the logging was done in that area and how quiet it has seemed since the crews left some forty years ago. We spent a most enjoyable evening with him and as we retired we thought how well he fit into God's scheme of things up there where everything except the cut timber is as nature provided.

New Dance Hall In New Lenox Nearing Completion

Work is proceeding on the new dance hall adjoining the Rube Tart tavern in New Lenox. Mr. Tart says the new hall will probably be ready for the opening dance within the next few weeks. Watch for more particulars.

The next morning we found we were in Schoolcraft County in the Heart of the Hiawatha National Forest. Our Government has purchased most of that area to preserve its natural beauty for the benefit of its people. We found red raspberries and blueberries growing wild along the road to be had for the picking. We found more deer, saw prairie chickens and grouse. We found good fishing in the many lakes and numerous trout streams nearby. We learned of many interesting things to be seen if we had the time.

The Tkos. B. Wyman Nursery, is the largest in the world where they have a capacity of 24,000,000 trees, that are constantly being planted in the cut over land of this great peninsula. The Kitch-ti-ki-pi palms in Book State Park and the Big Spring known to the Indians as the Mirror of Heaven whose waters are so cold that it will numb the hands quickly.

So many things to see and not enough time to see them all, but we are going back soon and we are going to find that place that we all hope to do some day and build our little cabin so we can go up and enjoy the many things that God has given us. When we get the cabin completed we are going to share it with others so they too can see that there is more to life than the steady pursuit of the dollar and give more time to God and all He represents. —R. HAROLD BRAASCH OF PALOS PARK ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

Harold Braasch was seriously injured Sunday evening when his brother Howard was cleaning a .38 calibre pistol and it accidentally discharged. The bullet struck Bud in the side and severed 5 small intestines. Dr. Leavitt of Orland was called and Bud was removed to the Silver Cross Hospital in Joliet. Mr. and Mrs. Braasch were not home at the time, but were phoned and soon arrived. The boy is suffering from internal hemorrhages and has such intense pain that he has to be kept under opiates all the time. Monday he was given a blood transfusion and is now given a 50-50 chance of recovering. His many friends and school mates in Palos wish him a very speedy recovery as he is a very popular boy with the neighbors.

MR. SMITH REALLY GOES TO WASHINGTON

In the hurly-burly of Labor Day week and the news from abroad, a very significant election took place, Friday, August 29 in Wisconsin. The not greatly noticed, this by-election in the First Congressional District was important, because it turned exclusively on President Roosevelt's foreign policy.

The by-election was held to fill the unexpired term as Congressman of the late Stephen Bolles, a Republican. The candidates were Lawrence H. Smith, a World War veteran with a distinguished record who ran as a Republican; and Thomas R. Amle, a former Congressman from the First District, running as a Democrat with the presumed blessing of the President.

Smith won by 29,657 votes to Amle's 16,942, and carried all five counties in the district in his campaign of opposition to the President's war policy. In two of these counties, Racine and Kenosha, there is a dominant labor-industrial vote. The issue was clean-cut. Smith opposed the President's war policy; Amle supported it. Yet Smith's majority of more than 12,000 votes ran far ahead of Wendell Willkie's margin of only 1,000 votes in the 1940 Presidential election.

This election should serve as a warning to war mongering politicians what to expect if they seek re-election next year. Here in Illinois we have Senator Scott Lucas who should be retired to private life if he should dare to seek re-election. A recent editorial in the Chicago Tribune dealing with Senator Lucas hit the nail on the head. It said:

"Mr. Lucas no longer thinks and talks like a midwesterner. He has gone eastern. He has alienated himself from Illinois. It should surprise no one if, at the end of his term, he were to settle in the east, where he now feels at home and where he finds a congenial society."

Elaine Stanger United In Marriage With Virgil Scott

At a quiet wedding in the rectory of St. Mary's Catholic Church in Mokena at 4 o'clock last Saturday afternoon, Miss Elaine Stanger of Mokena became the bride of Mr. Virgil Scott of Peotone, the Pastor of the church Rev. Father Roman officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother Louis Stanger, was lovely in the traditional white taffetta with long veil and carried a bouquet of white gladioli.

Mrs. Louis Stanger of Mokena, sister-in-law of the bride was Matron-of-Honor who wore aqua marine blue; Miss Violet Stanger, sister of the bride and Miss Mae Scott, sister of the groom were bridesmaids who both wore peach color taffetta gowns with peach color gladioli bouquets.

Little Ruth Ann Stanger, niece of the bride was flower-girl and was very sweet in a formal gown of peach taffetta made in the same style as that of the bridesmaids.

Mr. James Scott served his brother as best-man, and also Charles Stanger, brother of the bride.

A wedding reception and celebration was held at 8 o'clock in the evening in St. Mary's hall which was largely attended by relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott departed the same evening on a short wedding trip and are now living in the home of the bride in Mokena with her sister and brothers. Mr. Scott is employed in Chicago.

Wm. Hewson Well Known Orland Man Found Dead in Home

Wm. Hewson, aged 65 years, a long time well known resident of Orland township, was found dead in the bathroom of his home Sunday afternoon about 12:30 o'clock. Mrs. Hewson had gone to Elgin to visit with relatives and Mr. Hewson remained home alone. About noon on Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Liston of Oak Lawn, the latter a foster daughter, called at the Hewson home and found the doors locked and there was no response to their knock.

Thinking perhaps the Hewsons had gone out and would return soon they waited in their car. After waiting a while they noticed a light burning in a room on the second floor. This seemed rather out of the ordinary and they decided to investigate. A screen was removed from a window and entrance gained into the residence. After going through the rooms of the home they were greatly shocked when they opened the bathroom door to find Mr. Hewson lying on the floor. A physician was summoned and his opinion was that Mr. Hewson had been dead for 12 hours before he was found.

The deceased is survived by his wife, one son Howard of Orland Park, a foster daughter Mrs. Lawrence Liston of Oak Lawn, one grand son Robert, three sisters, Mrs. Sadie Sandiford of Joliet, Mrs. Clara Dueringer of Gibson City and Grace of Decatur. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the Hallinan funeral home in Blue Island. Burial was made in the Cooper Cemetery, Orland.

BOY SCOUTS ASSIST IN TRAFFIC SURVEY

Field notes on automobile trips were collected Tuesday of this week in a traffic survey employing Boy Scouts in this area. An analysis of these notes tracing main paths of motor traffic will guide future improvements in regulations and in construction including an eventual urban and rural super highway. Traffic merely slowed up so their licenses could be noted at observation stations located on the main concrete roads in this section. Heavy rain in the afternoon hindered the Boy Scouts and their work.

News-Bulletin Office And Editor's Home Number Are Now Both 2792

The telephone number of the News-Bulletin office is 2792 and the same number has been given to the phone in the residence of the editor. This phone formerly was listed in the directory as 2331. The reason why the phone number was changed is that often times calls were made to the office when it was closed, but by calling 2792 both the office and the residence telephones ring simultaneously and in that manner the call can be answered. So remember our number 2792 applies both to office and residence.

TAKES UNWARRANTED RAP AT ILLINOIS STATE PRESS ASSOCIATION

In a recent issue of the Joliet Spectator, Editor W. R. McCabe took an unwarranted rap at the Illinois Press Association by inferring that the Association was assisting in "milking the taxpayers" because the Association backed up bills in the last legislature pertaining to the publication of personal and real estate tax lists, especially in Cook County. Editor McCabe apparently does not know that there is no more extra expense added to the taxpayer, because these lists have been published in newspapers in the state with the exception of Cook County where the lists have been printed in pamphlet form, but with the publication of the tax lists in newspapers, no pamphlets will be printed, so there is no additional cost to the taxpayer.

Publication of tax lists has often resulted in the detection of errors which meant either a saving to the taxpayer or at least fair dealing.

MOKERA SOFTBALL TOURNAMENT FINALS TONIGHT AT ROBINSON'S FIELD - - - GAME TIME: 8:30

By special arrangement with Collier's Weekly and Western Newspaper Union this newspaper presents in condensed form a series of four articles by President Roosevelt currently appearing in that magazine. The articles are taken from the President's newly written introductions to forthcoming volumes of his state papers. The first, condensed below, contains the President's own story of the fight for Supreme court reform.

THE FIGHT GOES ON "The Constitution Prevails"

By Franklin D. Roosevelt

(Copyright, 1941, by Franklin D. Roosevelt and by The Crowell-Collier Publishing Company.)

THIS was the year of the famous Supreme court fight—1937. This was the year which marked a definite turning point in the history of the United States. For, this was the year which was to determine whether the kind of government which the people of the United States had voted for in 1932, 1934, and 1936 was to be permitted by the Supreme court to function. If it had not been permitted to function as a democracy, it is my reasoned opinion that there would have been great danger that it might have been ultimately compelled to give way to some alien type of government—in the vain hope that the new form of government might be able to give the average men and women the protection and co-operative assistance which they had the right to expect.

For that reason I regard the effort initiated by the message on the Federal Judiciary of February 5, 1937, and the immediate results of it, as among the most important domestic achievements of my first two terms in office.

For two decades the Supreme court of the United States had been successfully thwarting the common will of the overwhelming majority of the American people; and had been diverting the functions and philosophy of government into channels which ran counter to the thought and objectives of progressive opinions throughout the modern civilized world.

The big choice before the American people in 1932 had been to determine whether they should continue the old type of administration or install a new one—definitely committed to the proposition that the federal government had not only the power, but the duty, to step in to meet with bold action the economic forces at play. The people had made their choice in 1932, and had emphasized it in 1934.

By the time of the election of 1936, however, it had become clear that this new concept of government and of its relation to economic and social problems was in danger of complete frustration. And the road ahead, for further, or even different, effective action to meet these problems, seemed to be completely blocked.

For a dead hand was being laid upon this whole program of progress—to stay it all. It was the hand of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The executive and legislative branches of the government had gone into action immediately in 1933. But they soon found that, at least the path of progress along which they were moving, a majority of the Supreme Court of the United States was erecting a barrier which it was impossible to climb over, under or around. True, not everything had been destroyed by judicial fiat. But the whole question of the power of the federal government to handle these problems in an effective, decisive way had been placed not only in doubt, but in positive jeopardy.

In the struggle between the political power of the people as expressed by their representatives and the economic power of private property, the Supreme court, in the generation preceding the spring of 1937, seemed almost invariably to lean toward the latter.

NOTABLE EVENT

A series of articles by the President of the United States is a notable event in journalism. Seldom has any newspaper had an opportunity to publish anything under the name of any President. While the present series of articles is of historical rather than of current moment, it is a notable contribution both to history and journalism. This newspaper publishes the articles without bias as to the opinions contained in them.

And the judicial process was being more and more frequently exercised by the court, to lay low the efforts of government to meet the pressing needs of the times in which it was functioning. In the first 70 years of our constitutional history, the court invalidated only two acts of the congress; in the next 70 years it nullified 58. Between 1920 and 1930 it declared 19 federal statutes unconstitutional. To climax this growth, the court in the three years beginning in October, 1933, set aside 12 statutes, five of which occurred in a single court year, October, 1935.

I have already discussed in the Introduction to the 1935 volume, the more important Supreme court cases involving New Deal legislation. Recapitulation will show how hopeless it looked, by the time I started the so-called Supreme court fight on February 5, 1937, that any really effective legislative program could withstand the assaults being made by the judicial branch of the government.

The first major blow had come in January, 1935. Our efforts to remove chaos from the third largest industry in the country—petroleum—were struck down. The oil-producing states had been unable individually to meet the problems which came from overproduction of oil, wasteful competition, and consequent bankruptcy prices. Only the national government could save the industry. It proceeded to try to do it. Pursuant to congressional statute, it prescribed quotas of oil for each oil-producing state, and permitted each state to prescribe fair quotas for each well within its boundaries. It then prohibited any interstate shipments of "hot oil," that is, oil produced in excess of these quotas. The states alone could themselves never have prevented these interstate shipments. The decision of the court, however, was that the statute was unconstitutional as a delegation of legislative power to the President.

This was the first time that a federal statute had ever been nullified on such a ground. But, unfortunately, it was not to be the last. This new doctrine—nowhere specifically mentioned in the Constitution—added much doubt and perplexity to framing all future legislation. Some delegation is, of course, necessary if government is to function at all. But neither from the words of the Constitution, nor from the mouth of the court, came any standards to fix the amount of delegation permissible.

The next decisions were on the question of the government's power to abrogate gold clauses in private and public contracts. These decisions, therefore, involved the entire control by the congress of the currency of the United States, and the whole gold and silver policy of the duly elected government. This policy was, to a great extent, the basis of the recovery program—the means used to bring order out of chaos.

precious element, they have good grounds for apprehension, as it was not possible to consult with the wives of the officers before the O.K. was given to the architects to proceed. Officers responsible for the base construction work are bracing for the shock, when the women learn they will have no opportunity to comment on room arrangements, closets, decorating and other items so dear to their hearts.

in foreign exchange and domestic currency, and to remake the unfair debt structure then in existence. It can well be said that, in these decisions, the court was passing on the validity of the whole American economy, which had been accepted by the business and financial world almost universally since the enactment of the statute a year and a half earlier, and which was then in process of adaptation to the changing world economy.

The congressional action was sustained as to private contracts—but only by a five to four vote. It was held invalid as to public obligations; but by technical legalistic reasoning, the disastrous results of such a holding were avoided by a conclusion that no actual damage had been proved. Even as to this conclusion, four of the nine justices disagreed.

By the slim margin of one human being, this very foundation of our recovery had been upheld. What a slim thread on which to hang the fate of a nation!

Then came, all in one day, May 27, 1935, a unanimous decision that the Frazier-Lemke act, designed to help farm mortgagors, was unconstitutional; a unanimous decision that the President could not remove a federal trade commissioner, although in an earlier case in 1926, the court had stated that the Executive could remove any officer he could appoint, even one with quasi-judicial powers; and a unanimous decision that the National Industrial Recovery act was unconstitutional.

This last decision was the most far-reaching. It again invoked the shadowy doctrine of unlawful delegation of powers to the Executive. If the court had stopped here, its job would have been done, and the damage would not have been wholly irreparable. But it went farther, and held that the statute and the code-making power under it were not a valid exercise of the power of the congress to regulate interstate commerce. This broad, sweeping assertion immediately cast a long shadow of doubt over everything which we had been doing, and were expecting to do, for the benefit of U. S. citizens, through the federal control of interstate commerce.

This shadow of doubt became more definite and certain when the court, on January 6, 1936, by a vote of six to three, invalidated the agricultural adjustment program. The statute thus set aside had been enacted in 1933, and had been absolutely essential to the survival of agriculture in the panic of that year. The states alone were powerless by themselves to cope with the reduced farm income, with the prevailing bankruptcy prices for farm products with the burdensome surpluses and overproduction of farm commodities. If one state tried by itself, the adjoining state could nullify its efforts. Only the federal government could help—and in 1933 it did, almost immediately. The widespread, beneficial results of our farm program enacted to meet the agricultural crisis of 1933 are well-known now. Its benefits extended not alone to the farmer; they spread to all sections and to all groups throughout the land, by furnishing the farmers with purchasing power with which they could buy industrial products and manufactures of all kinds.

But all this effort was destroyed. The basis on which it was destroyed was even more disastrous in its implications than the immediate decision itself. It was apparently set aside on the chief ground, among others, that overproduction of farm commodities and all the dire results of such overproduction were not matters of general welfare but purely a local condition, of purely local concern to the respective states.

To remedy this condition, it was held, the congress could not pay farmers for voluntary crop limitation, under the general welfare clause of the Constitution—which by its terms would seem clearly to give the congress power to tax and spend for the general welfare. The three dissenting justices characterized the majority opinion as a "tortured construction of the Constitution," and indicated how far reaching would be the effects of this kind of decision—a decision which was not based upon legal reasoning at all, but upon political and economic bias.

Industry Is Hoping for Action to End White House Bottleneck . . . Hitler's Reputation as a Prophet May Be Discredited.
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Industry is still hoping for some move to end the White House bottleneck in national defense. So far there is a great deal of talk about it, but nothing fundamental is even promised.

The trouble is that "Papa," as FDR likes to call himself in discussing any question involving final decisions, still has the last word. That means there can be no action until FDR has passed on any particular problem. He has not really delegated authority. He merely has set up organization after organization which proposes what shall be done. Generally a proposal, lying on the President's desk, is opposed by another proposal from another organization. And the President has to pass on the merits of both, sometimes three or four proposals, before a wheel can turn.

Most spectacular has been the rapidly increasing overlapping, and friction, between the OPM, headed by William S. Knudsen, and OPACS, headed by Leon Henderson. Judge Samuel Roseman has been designated to arbitrate that dispute.

But the appointment of this referee shows the lack of power to act with which both OPM and OPACS have been entrusted.

The contrast with the last war, when Bernard M. Baruch headed the War Industries board and had almost czarlike powers, is distressing to those who want to see the "arsenal of democracy" function at top speed.

It is alleged that many mistakes were made in the last war. In fact, it may be said many mistakes were made. But a careful survey of the post-war criticism by business men and army and navy officers in the service, shows that very few mistakes stemmed from this delegation of power to the War Industries board.

Wilson Entrusted Huge Powers to Baker

Students of that period always have been aghast at the extent to which President Woodrow Wilson entrusted power to Newton D. Baker, his secretary of war. It was Secretary Baker who selected Gen. John J. Pershing, despite the clamor for Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood. This is true despite all the allegations that it was President Wilson's own feeling against Wood which counted.

As a matter of fact, the decision not to send General Wood to France, after General Pershing had been selected as commander in chief, was made by General Pershing and not Secretary Baker. Secretary Baker also delegated authority. He went so far as to have General Pershing send his own choice, Gen. Peyton C. March, back to Washington, to make sure that everything General Pershing wanted the war department to do was done.

This is cited not because it is parallel in detail, but because it is the same sort of idea. The trouble is that so little power is delegated.

This has been characteristic of President Roosevelt since he entered the White House, and, curiously enough, it was believed to be characteristic of Woodrow Wilson. But when the big war effort came President Wilson delegated power right and left.

Hitler's Prophecy In Danger of Discredit

Interviewers permitted to talk to German prisoners in the Canadian camps report that almost as a unit the Germans expect a German victory. Not only that, but they expect it this year.

This means that the whole German army and navy, and the German people believe the same thing! Several shrewd British officials in Washington believe that this is the most important factor in the war at the present moment—far beyond many other phases recorded in the daily headlines. They point out that it is simply impossible for the whole German people not to be bitterly disappointed as the winter passes and no peace is in sight.

Any soldier who was in the front lines in France in 1918 will confirm the fact that the German army was not crushed in the last war. It was fighting magnificently up until a few weeks before the Armistice. The German submarines were taking a terrific toll of shipping in October, 1918, up until a few days before the end. Nor was Germany starved out. The food they had on hand was not what they would have ordered, but it was sufficient. And there was enough on hand, as the German people knew, to last for a long time.

It was the German morale which cracked in November, 1918, and it cracked because suddenly the Germans realized that they had been deceived by the kaiser. He had promised them victory in 1918. He had specifically promised that they would win BEFORE America would be able to get troops to Europe.

THE STORY SO FAR: Bound for the Chibougamau gold country, six men lost their lives on the Nottaway river. Red Malone, Garrett Finlay, brother of one of the six, and Blaise, half-breed guide, arrive at Nottaway posing as surveyors.

Red's blue eyes twinkled as he watched Finlay read. "Some skirt snatcher—this boy!" he chuckled. There were gleams of light in Finlay's gray eyes as he handed the letter to Malone. "Read that, Red, while I talk with Blaise." Drawing Blaise aside Garry gave him the gist of the message. "Is it a trick?" he asked.

"For sure!" came the guttural response. "Old trick! He bait you wid woman!"

Garry slowly shook his head. "Blaise, that girl's in trouble! She couldn't write that way otherwise. Let's see what Red thinks."

Malone's dubious eyes were still busy with the sheets of blue paper in his hand. At last he grunted: "Huh! That's a tough letter to dope out, Garry. I'd hate to trust a hair on that black head of hers and yet it sounds like the living truth. If it's only a scheme to get you to that beach so they can drill you, I take off my hat to her, she's a genius."

"Red, I tell you she's desperate! Isadore couldn't prompt her to write that letter. It's real. It's a cry from the depths. But what can be the trouble there? I knew the night of the dinner something worried her."

Malone thoughtfully scratched his head. His eyes wrinkled quizzically. "Garry, have you happened to think she's only a stepdaughter? I wonder if—mebbe—he's been bothering—"

"I thought of that. It's possible it's Isadore. Let me read it again."

Garry went over the blue sheets still faintly fragrant. Could that girl possibly act out a part like this? And yet his better judgment told him the letter was a decoy.

"Cool ruffian, this Isadore!" he speculated. "If he's behind this, he's had her warn us of just what he intends to do, to make it sound right. And he's sized me up as a half-wit who'll fall for this maiden in distress stuff. Well, he's right!"

When he had been fed, Louis Mikis started back with Finlay's answer. It was "Yes!"

CHAPTER IX

Two days later a Peterboro hung offshore a few miles east of Isadore's fur-post. In the boat a man searched through binoculars for a canoe paddled by a woman.

"If it's an ambush, Blaise, she won't show up," insisted Finlay, "for they'll expect me to land early at the beach to wait for her. They'll be there and will hop on me at once. What would they gain by waiting and bringing her into it? She might get hit."

"I tell you, Red, they'll never let her come if it's an ambush. There'd be no object in it. If she does come, she'll see that I trust her—believe in her. Don't you realize how humiliating it would be to know that I think her capable of tricking me like that—that I suspect her and am bringing a guard?"

"Oh, I see what you mean, but I don't like it. I want to be handy in case of trouble."

"Thank you, Red."

Garry again raised the glasses. "There she is!" he announced, quietly. He was conscious of the sudden pick-up of his heart. "Whew!" he murmured, as a wave of elation beat through him, "have I got it as bad as that?"

The Peterboro reached the spruce point and Garry stepped out. "So long, Blaise! See you soon and I'll have something to tell! Bo-jo, Red!"

With a wave of his hand Finlay started on his long walk. Lise Demarais was there waiting, when he reached the white beach. He suddenly realized how she had obsessed his thoughts since he last saw her gray face that night at Isadore's. And now, in her desperation she had turned to him.

Lise stood beside her canoe. "Somehow I knew you'd come!" She grasped his hand.

Warm with color from her long paddle, she was even lovelier than he had remembered her. "Could any man have refused to come after such a letter?"

"Yes, knowing what you do, most men would have been afraid. They wouldn't have trusted me."

"But I'm a mind reader, as I told you. And I'm worried about you, Lise Demarais."

"You're also a brave man." There was a look in her sloe-black eyes that started his blood singing. "Let's sit down. It's a long story." She threw herself on the sand, offered him a cigarette from a silver case and lit one herself. For a time she smoked, clasping her knees while she gazed straight before her under brows like black brush strokes on her transparent skin.

His eager gaze moved from the dark cloud of her long bob and the brilliant eyes to her round throat.

"I don't know why I should have turned to you in my trouble," she began, "unless it's because you're

Finlay receives an anonymous letter suggesting that the six men were not drowned as reported. Suspicion prevails that Isadore, rich fur man, has made a gold strike and aims to keep prospectors out of the country at any cost. The three in great danger yourself. Don't you realize they won't let you finish this survey—won't let you leave this country?"

"Forget the survey! I know Tete-Blanche is after us. I saw him at the head of the lake. We'll take care of him. I came here to learn why you've got to leave Isadore's place and when."

"I was frantic when I wrote you. It must have sounded delirious and strained but I was desperate. I'd just had a terrible scene with Jules. He insists on my marrying Felix Blondell, his partner. I've refused time and time again. But he won't listen. Blondell handles the business in Montreal. He's coming in the August plane. He drinks hard when he's here and I'm afraid of him."

Finlay's face was flint-hard as he listened.

"Jules told me I'd had my chance and refused it," she went on, her breath quickening while her pulse beat in her throat. "He said when Blondell came in August I'd have neither his sympathy nor his protection. I could take care of myself. Think of one's stepfather saying a thing like that!"

Finlay's eyes were savage with dancing lights. "Isadore said that to you?"

"Yes and more. It was ghastly! You don't know Jules Isadore!" she cried. "He can purr like a cat and be so smooth—so charming. But he's as pitiless as a wolf. He killed my mother with his women and his heartlessness. Of course, he's given me a home, education, clothes. But his word has always been law. Corinne and I live like children; are told nothing. He's so secretive. Why we're positive there's something queer going on here, now, at Waswanipi, but we don't know what it is."

Finlay was alive with interest. "Queer? What do you mean?"

"Every summer, in August, a plane flies down from the north. Later, it goes south but it carries no fur. Why should a plane fly here every August and go south empty?"

Garry Finlay, also, wanted the answer to that question. At last he had struck something. "That's strange!" he said, his face as impassive as wood. "It always comes in August, you say?"

"Yes. That's why I warned you not to stay here until August. I overheard Jules boast to Batoche that no prospectors nosing around here in August would ever see home. He thinks you're prospectors, you know."

"Then he's struck gold and wants to keep it a secret?"

"Corinne and I think so. We've an idea he ships the gold dust and nuggets in bags on that plane and doesn't want anyone to know about it."

"But why should it come from the Bay?"

"We don't know but he seems to want to hide the direction from which it comes. That's sure. He's nervous as a cat, then, won't even have Indians around the place."

Finlay wondered what he had stumbled into. A plane from the Bay! What did that mean? Then he said: "Mrs. Isadore got the drugged wine intended for us. What did he intend to do—drop us in the lake?"

"No, I think he wanted to search you—learn who you were. I was so afraid something would happen. I wanted to warn you. Then I saw that hideous Tete-Blanche. After you left Jules struck Corinne for drinking that wine—struck her in the face. He was like a madman."

"Nice fellow! Of course he knows he can't last long at this game. Already six men who have entered men start out on the Nottaway for the Hudson's Bay post. They visit Isadore in his magnificent home where they meet Lise, his pretty stepdaughter. She sends Finlay a note saying she is in trouble and asking him to meet her.

this country have disappeared. The police will be here soon." "Six men?" she gasped. "I've heard of only two!"

"Six prospectors have disappeared and two men have been wounded," Finlay smiled significantly.

"Your limp, that night!" she suddenly cried, her eyes wide with understanding. "You—you were wounded in the leg on the way here?"

"Yes."

"They ambushed you on the Nottaway! But you're all right? Oh, they'll stop at nothing! Do you understand now why I've got to get away?"

"Yes. What was Tete-Blanche doing there that night?"

"I don't know."

"Well, don't worry, we'll have you safe at Matagami by August."

She gave a deep sigh. For a space they smoked in silence while Finlay's thoughts were busy with the mysterious plane. Then he glanced at her. She was smiling at him through curious eyes.

"Charming gossip we're having on my bathing beach on this lovely July day!" she said ruefully.

Her mood had suddenly changed. The compelling charm of her drove from his head all thoughts of Isadore. A beautiful girl sat beside him, desirable, baffling. And in her slow smile was veiled challenge.

"You swim here often?"

Her eyes were busy with a trim moccasin toying with the sand. She raised them and her lip curled.

"Fishing for an invitation to join the beautiful mermaids? If you are, you're distinctly not invited. We usually swim in our scales, you know."

She flung herself around, facing him, and impulsively took his hand. "What children we are!" she cried. "This is the second time I've ever talked with you, Garry Finlay, and I'm babbling like a sub-deb at her first big dance."

"I never met one but I'm sure I'd love sub-debs." He leaned toward her. "Do you know how lovely you are and—how dangerous?" he said.

A warm undertone of pink pushed up over her neck and cheeks. She seemed suddenly confused. "It's growing late! I've got to go!" She was on her feet. "You'll take me to Matagami when I write? How can I thank you for daring to come? Oh, it's like a reprieve from a death sentence! I want to dance and sing!" She stood beside her canoe grasping her paddle. Her voice quavered: "Au revoir! Very nice and reckless man!" Her eyes danced dangerously.

"When you send word, I'll come!" he said, thickly. He slid her canoe into the water, turned and with a quick movement had her in his arms.

With a swift catch of the breath she flung back her dark head and smiled up at him. He kissed her hair and eyes and responsive mouth. "You sorceress!" he choked. "You've bewitched me! Courage, midnight eyes! I'll take you to Matagami. Good-by, Beautiful!"

She gave a low laugh as her arm tightened on his neck, and for a moment returned his kisses, then breaking away, leaped into the canoe and paddled off. Reaching the point, she blew a kiss with her hand and passed from sight.

His pulses drumming, Finlay stood at the edge of the water, groping for his mental balance. With her charm and changing moods Lise Demarais had played on his senses as a musician on a harp, run the gamut from laughter to tears. The hard-boiled Garry Finlay had been pliant in her hands as a willow sprout, but in the end she had left him wondering whether she was sincere or a consummate actress.

At the thought he glanced up and down the beach. The shore was deserted. Still under the spell of the girl who had paddled away, he started for the spruce point to meet the Peterboro. Again he felt her arms on his neck, her warm lips, looked into the dancing depths of her eyes.

He had reached a stretch of shore piled with boulders and had cut back into the bush where the walking was easier when the brittle snap of a dry stick stopped him in his tracks. His body stiffened while his right hand moved under his shirt to the stock of his .45.

"What's that?" he muttered. Again there was a movement in the brush somewhere in front of him. Finlay slipped behind a spruce, his eyes stabbing the surrounding undergrowth. Then, from his rear, came a sound in the scrub and he flattened under the low branches.

"So it was acting after all!" A wave of remorse chilled him like a bitter wind as he lay beneath the overhanging boughs. Surrounded as he knew he must be—caught in Isadore's trap—his ears strained for movements of the men who hunted him while his thoughts hung to the girl who had so lightly led him to this.

THE ETERNAL GOD, THE SOURCE OF HELP

LESSON TEXT—Revelation 7:1-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.—Revelation 4:8.

A revelation into the future is something that would interest most of us, and we have it in this lesson. We agree with Dr. Wilbur Smith that "this is an excellent opportunity to bring to the hearts of our pupils some of these divinely revealed truths which the world, in its mad rush today, so easily and tragically puts aside."

The portion of Revelation, chapter seven, which is before us comes immediately after a section dealing with Israel. The Church is not mentioned. The ones spoken of have come out of "the great tribulation" (as the Revised Version rightly translates it) and are evidently Gentiles who have come to believe in Christ during that time of unparalleled tribulation described in later chapters of this book.

Our lesson therefore deals with a specific time and a certain people in connection with an event yet to take place. But we find in this passage the description of the experiences of those who, like Christians of our day, triumphed through their saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. We may therefore here learn something of the future blessedness of the redeemed.

I. Saved Forever and Ever (vv. 9-12).

Salvation is a reality, and we are never going to be more certain of it than when we, like this multitude, stand in God's presence to praise Him for what He has done in our lives. It is real. Praise God!

Notice that there was an unnumbered multitude from all nations. The good tidings at the time of Christ's birth were for all people (Luke 2:10), and some from all nations respond. Note too that the hosts of the Lord are greater than we might at first suppose.

These redeemed ones had immediate access to God's throne, offering their praise direct. They were clad in the white robes of God's own purity and bore in their hands the palms of victory. They, with the angels, the elders (possibly representing the Church already caught up into heaven), and the living creatures (not "beasts" as in A.V. They are divine beings of highest character), ascribed a seven-fold praise to God "forever and ever. Amen." It is glorious picture of completed redemption.

II. Serving Day and Night (vv. 13-15a).

It should be observed that even those who came through the great tribulation did not look to their own deeds or faithfulness to save them. Their white robes of righteousness were washed in "the blood of the Lamb" (v. 14).

Now that they had reached eternity through peril, toil and pain, they would (according to many folks' idea of heaven) sit down for an eternal rest and retirement. Not at all—they found their joy in serving their blessed Lord "night and day"; that is, without any weakness or exhaustion, without any failures or defeat.

III. Satisfied Throughout Eternity (vv. 15b-17).

To be covered by the "tabernacle" of God (whatever it may mean) surely betokens the perfect and constant protection of His own presence. Everything destructive and disturbing will be gone. There will be no lack of any good thing needed to satisfy every desire. There will be no thirst unquenched and no hunger unsatisfied (see similar descriptive passage in Rev. 21:3, 4).

The redeemed are said to be under the tender care of the Good Shepherd Himself; the Lamb (our Redeemer) who is in the midst of God's throne shall lead them, not beside "the still waters" of the Twenty-third Psalm, but "unto living fountains of water." Thus in the beauty of figurative speech, we are assured that God's provision for His children, the redeemed in Christ Jesus, will perfectly satisfy every need of soul and spirit. There is no such satisfaction this side of eternity, but we shall find it there.

Then too, there is to be no sorrow. God Himself is the guarantee that there shall be nothing in that blessed land to cause anyone to shed a tear. Think what that means! Think of the weeping of boys and girls, men and women, who in this world of hatred, sin and suffering, shed bitter tears of pain or sorrow. Well, it were almost enough to know that heaven is a place where there shall be no tears.

Remember that the promises of joyous completed redemption for these, the Gentile believers of the great tribulation, will be for all God's children, for us who believe in Christ. Reader, will you not join us today if you are still an unbeliever? Take Christ now as your Saviour.

Fringe on Our Flag

There is no significance attached to the yellow fringe on the American flag. According to the war department it may be regarded as "fringe only, and is of no value or significance as a part of the flag."

The use of the fringe has long been a debated question, although the war department sanctions it, and the United States Flag association does not consider the use of the fringe as improper. Nevertheless, the first flag adopted by the Continental congress in 1777 bore no fringe, and many patriotic citizens feel the American flag needs no decoration.

The men in the service themselves have solved the problem of what they want in the way of gifts from the folks back home. First hand information from enlisted men on shipboard, in camps and barracks indicate that tobacco is first choice in the gift line-up. Actual sales figures from service stores show that the favorite cigarette with men in the Army, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard is Camel. Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco is another special favorite. Local dealers feature Camels by the cation and Prince Albert in the pound tins as doubly welcome gifts to the men in the service from the folks back home.—Adv.

Tinley Park News

The next regular meeting of the Garden Club will be held at the home of Mrs. Emma Combs Thursday afternoon September 18.

Miss Dorothy Campbell left Wednesday for Bloomington to enter Illinois Wesleyan University. She will participate in Freshman Week activities prior to the beginning of the scholastic year on September 17.

TINLEY PARK SCHOOL NEWS
A new addition has been made to the school program of the Tinley Park School. This addition has been instituted for the purpose of giving youngsters an opportunity to participate in some extra activity which is not offered in the regular program.

The teachers each have charge of an activity. These activities include Newspaper handicraft, band, nature study, dramatics and glee club. Handicraft will be conducted by Miss Farrar. All types of hand work will be available to the children. Miss Tully will have charge of the band. This will consist of a melody band with the thought that in the future this will develop into a band made up of regular instruments. Mrs. Sandigge will conduct the nature study class which will consist of the study of animal and plant life. Mrs. Rauhoff will direct the travel study group. This group will take imaginary trips through out the world using actual time schedules and facilities of existing means of transportation. The newspaper will be conducted by Miss Gelford. This group will learn the actual operation of a newspaper and all its departments including the business management. The dramatic group will be led by Miss DeYoung. The children will conduct tryouts and present plays. Mrs. Hesbol will lead the Glee Club made up of children wishing to sing. They will also present programs. It is planned to invite the general public to view the results of this program.

On Friday, September 12 a representative from the Gamble-Hinge Music Company will present a program explaining the use and types of Melody band instruments. All parents and patrons of the school are invited to attend this program which begins at 2 p.m. in the auditorium of the school.

The authorities of the Tinley Park School ask the help of the parents in directing the children walking along the highway for the sake of safety. It is requested that the children who find it necessary to walk along the highway, walk on the left side of the road facing the traffic and that when an automobile approaches they step off the concrete to let the car pass. Those who ride bicycles along the road should ride on the right side of the road with the traffic and that they do not cross the road except at crossings. These are rules which guide the State Highway Police and the parents are asked to help direct the children.

"Pot O'Gold" a merry musical and romance story starring the superb performances of James Stewart, Paulette Goddard, Charles Winninger and Horace Heidt and his orchestra, will be featured at the Roxy Theatre at Lockport, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Stewart loves music and runs a small town music store, which finds up and he accepts a job with his Uncle Charlie, who is played by Winninger. Miss Goddard is cast in the role of Molly McCorkle, a sharp tongued Irish lass, whose mother runs a boarding house and houses Heidt and the band. Uncle Charlie and Mrs. McCorkle are continually in a verbal feud, and the band playing on the roof only adds fire to the bitterness. In one melee, the tomato is hit in the eye with a tomato which was thrown by his nephew, as Stewart has fallen for Miss Goddard's charms. Uncle Charlie leaves on a vacation and leaves Jimmy in charge of his radio program, so he hires Heidt to play on the program. To avenge this move, Molly announces that a thousand dollars will be given away each week, and the announcement becomes a sensation. The program becomes a success, Uncle Charlie acclaims Jimmy to be an advertising genius and the feud is stopped forever.

If you have ever wondered what you would do if you suddenly fell heir to a million dollars, see "Million Dollar Baby" with Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn and Ronald Reagan at the Roxy Theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

Friday and Saturday, the Roxy Theatre will feature "Barnacle Bill", a story of the waterfront roustabouts, with Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main, Leo Carrillo and Barton MacLane.

CAREFUL AND COURTEOUS DRIVERS

Twenty-four hour taxi service.

This taxi service has attained a wide popularity because of the prompt, painstaking and economical service that is rendered. It is needless for us to remark that this service has been reliable and courteous.

They have set so high a standard of service that in all of this section there is no taxi service that can compare with it.

They offer a complete taxi service to residents of this section and have day and night service. They offer special rates to sight-seeing parties and will give rates on request. Touring cars are also available.

"Careful, Courteous Drivers" is the slogan of the LaGrange Cab Co. Every driver is an "escort" absolutely trustworthy, and has been selected by the LaGrange Cab Co. for their organization after careful investigation into his character. In the large metropolitan cities like Chicago and New York, the cabman will take you to your door—and the same service is available here. There is no need to be afraid regardless of the hour if you are riding in a LaGrange cab.

The management is in the hands of progressive and public spirited people. They have always been boosters for all propositions which promise public improvement.

The LaGrange Cab Company is under the direction of responsible business people and well known in transportation circles throughout the state.

Mrs. John Lowry and family of Midlothian, Mr. and Mrs. Art Liebing of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Powell. A delicious dinner was enjoyed by all and Gordon received many well wishes and useful gifts. Happy birthday Gordon and many more of them!!!

Don't forget the giant Flower show to be held Saturday afternoon September 13 at 2 P. M. at the Village Hall. Supper and entertainment are included in the plans and V. F. Beliajus will be presented in the evening in a folk dance recital. Those attending the exhibit may have their evening meal, cafeteria style, between 5 and 8 o'clock. Mrs. George B. Ward is managing chairman, and those serving on her committee are Mesdames: J. W. Mahaffay, I. H. Pronger, Otto Schmidt, O. W. Johnson and L. M. Bussey. The exhibits will be judged by Mrs. M. L. Schmitz, state garden chairman of the Federated clubs; Mrs. John A. Kotell, 3rd dist. chairman of gardens, and Mesdames J. H. Burdett, Wallace Combs, Lester Lanyon and F. H. Greager.

Daniel Sullivan died Thursday in St. Francis hospital in Blue Island. Funeral services were conducted Monday morning at 10 A. M. in Sacred Heart Church with Father Rooney, Father Day, Father Gorey and Father McMahon officiating. Burial was in the Sag Cemetery. Mr. Sullivan was 74 years old and a life long resident of Palos township. He lived on his farm at 107th street and Kean avenue. He was township school trustee for 49 years and a road commissioner for many years. Two brothers and two sisters survive.

People in Palos were shocked to hear of the death of William Hewson of Orland Sunday. Mr. Hewson was a well known figure in Palos and sincerest sympathy is extended to the family.

THE LA GRANGE THEATRE

MR. W. E. BAIL, MANAGER

84 South LaGrange Road, La Grange, Ill. Phone LaGrange 460

There is nothing which adds so greatly to the progress of the community as does a "live-wire" theatre. The LaGrange Theatre not only brings the world's greatest stars here to entertain us, but brings added business activity and thus benefits the entire community. They should have the most liberal patronage of the entire people.

In this day of high cost of living the management of the LaGrange Theatre has never lowered the standard but insists the best is none too good for the people of this part of the country.

While the class of production that they show costs a little more than the ordinary kind, yet they have refused to lower their standards.

The people of the rural communities when tired of the toil of the day can find no more pleasure than an evening's entertainment at this popular theatre. A few minutes drive to town for an interesting photoplay will make one more fit for another day's work.

In the past few years there is no one industry that has come into more prominence in the feminine world than the furrier, and Bear's Custom Furs is upon the minds of all ladies who want the best there is in furs.

They are not only retailers but manufacturers of furs and as a consequence the stock includes all styles of garments that are in vogue as well as a great variety of skins from which to select. This is an important factor in the choosing of not only a becoming garment but one that will give the service. In the event that they do not have or have sold the particular kind of garment you desire they will make it up for you according to your individual ideas. This makes the stock the most comprehensive possible and includes the whole range of furs and models.

The remodeling and repairing department is very careful in the work on garments so that each customer gets the best of workmanship. Here they will clean, remodel, relene or repair any furs that you may have and give you the best of service.

In making this 1941 review of the progress of this part of the country we are glad to compliment The Bear Furrier upon the high position they occupy in the business and social world and to refer them to all of our readers.

POST BOTTLE GAS SERVICE

Mr. R. H. Post, Prop.

101 North LaGrange Road LaGrange, Illinois
Phone LaGrange 2100

No matter where you live—in the small town, in the suburbs or in the country, you can enjoy the convenience and economy of gas service, equal to the gas service provided by the public utility concern and living is raised to the higher degree of comfort with gas for use in cooking.

The Post-Bottle Gas Service of LaGrange are local representatives and distributors for Post-Bottle gas.

Post-Bottle gas comforts with the requirements of the fine underwriters and has been listed by them as standard equipment. Every country home and every small town may now enjoy all the advantages of complete gas service which is safe, economical and convenient.

Post-Bottle gas is a thoroughly tested development in the gas equipment field, offers to small towns, suburban and country homes a service comparable to that of any gas company. It offers a pure, clean, odorless, sootless gas, ideal for cooking, hot water heating and auxiliary space heating, at a cost which will appeal to the most thrifty.

For several years Post-Bottle gas has been serving homes in this territory dependably and economically. It is a proven success.

If the home is located in the suburbs or small town or in the country gas service is generally not available. It is such a home that Post-Bottle gas serves. One may, now make his home in the country and still enjoy the conveniences of the "completely modern" gas served city home.

Gas service is a necessity for the "completely modern" home whether located in city or country. The experience of others clearly shows that Post-Bottle gas produces the cheapest and most satisfactory fuel for the isolated home. It is no longer necessary to deny your family the satisfaction of gas service, no matter where you live.

The service of this concern brings modern methods of cooking into the most remote country home. In providing a service of this kind they are rendering to suburban and country homes and in territory like ours where no gas main exists, a definite contribution in modern equipment, relieving the necessity of long hours over a hot stove—Post-Bottle gas is instant, safe and convenient.

Patronize this leading gas service.

MIDWEST FLYING SERVICE

Mr. H. A. Mauer, Proprietor

5801 EAST AVENUE Brookfield 8290
COMPLETE FLYING COURSE TO THE PUBLIC.
SO. COOK COUNTY'S RELIABLE FLYING SCHOOL
A Creditable Flying School for our South Cook County Readers
Learn to Fly in Safe, Economical, Sturdy, Stable Planes.

The training of pilots and mechanics for commercial flying has been and will be comparable to the automobile age when it becomes necessary to give everyone instructions to provide for the safety of the public, Midwest Flying Service has left nothing undone in providing the most up to date facilities for training service.

One of the special features of the service is the aviation school which he maintains for the purpose of instructing people how to fly and handle a plane.

This up-to-date concern is operating strictly in accordance with the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The Management of this enterprise has had a special training in this important field and is offering the people of this section the advantages of any metropolitan city right here at their very door. The initial cost if such an endeavor is an investment of many dollars, as operating expense is very great. Let us help the public realize the value of this service to the community. It is truly a tribute to the business sagacity of the Management that actuates them to give us this fine aerial field. There is probably no other community this size in the country that has better advantages in this respect and the enterprise should receive an undivided support as it is training young men to become aviators, as well as women to become aviatrixes.

It is a well known fact that this School has turned out many well known and efficient pilots.

The instructors at this School are more interested in the success of their students than the students are themselves.

At his marriage parlors everything is in readiness at all times for the bride and groom. He performs many marriage ceremonies and it is very convenient for couples to come here to be married. Many do not care for church or home weddings with the worrying over details and many expenses which accompany them and much prefer the simple yet dignified service as performed by Justice Pendl.

This prominent Judge and Justice of the Peace has given general satisfaction to the public by his conscientious service at any time of the day or night. Justice Pendl is noted for his accuracy and knowledge of general business and wide acquaintance over this section of the state. In making decisions he acquaints himself with the opinions of both sides and then decides rightly and wisely.

Justice Pendl also features notary service and if you have any papers or other documents which must be sworn to before a notary he can fill them out promptly and correctly. His collection service has been a potent factor in the business life of this part of the state. By turning over accounts to Justice Pendl one can save much trouble, worry and time as he can get the money and without antagonizing the debtor and they will make a prompt settlement.

In this 1941 Business Review and Survey, our three newspapers are pleased to compliment Justice Pendl upon the part he is playing in the business life of this section and to refer his courteous, thorough and excellent service to their readers.

MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR LEFTOVERS!
(See Recipes Below)

TRIMMED TO TEMPT . . .

Leftovers on purpose! There are so many delicious ways of using leftovers, why not call them "planned aheads"? Casseroles, meat loaves, salads, soups and so on will do much to turn the tag ends of day-before-yesterday's dinner into mealtime "come-ons."

The trick is not to serve the same old hash or stew in the same old way, but to give leftover foods fresh faces with fresh recipes. Like many thrifty homemakers, you, too, can discover the economy, both in time and money, of buying and preparing a large roast, or more than enough vegetables, with leftovers in mind.

You can't always make mealtime foods come out even. So, let's be practical about the situation. If you serve roast chicken or baked salmon for Sunday dinner, plan to do all sorts of things with the leftover portions for weekday meals.

Here's a roll call of leftovers and how to fix them—proof that "day-after" foods can be not only good, but delicious!

Summer Meat Pie.

(Serves 6)

2 pounds beef neck or shank or
2½ cups leftover meat, cubed
3 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons lard
1 small onion, sliced
1 green pepper, chopped
1 cup carrot slices
Sliced mushrooms
Salt and pepper

Have the beef neck or shank cut into 1-inch cubes. Dredge in flour, seasoned with salt and pepper. Brown meat in hot lard with onion and green pepper. Cover with hot water and let simmer 1 hour, with kettle tightly covered. Transfer to baking dish, add carrots and mushrooms. Thicken meat liquid, pour over meat and vegetables. Cook in moderate oven (350 degrees) about 40 minutes, then pipe a border of mashed potatoes around the edge, and bake till potatoes brown.

*Salmon a la Ring.

4 tablespoons butter
4½ tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
½ pimiento
½ small green pepper
2 cups flaked salmon
2 egg yolks
½ cup mayonnaise
Salt and pepper to taste

Melt the butter, blend in flour, add the milk and cook slowly, stirring constantly until thickened and smooth. Add green pepper and pimiento cut into strips. Add flaked salmon. When hot, add egg yolks which have been beaten, cook a moment, then fold in mayonnaise and seasonings. Heat again and blend thoroughly. Serve this mixture in the center of a rice ring which has been turned out on a serving platter or chop plate. Garnish with the buttered peas and sprinkle with paprika.

LYNN SAYS:

When brown sugar hardens so that it cannot be measured accurately, spread it in a shallow pan and heat it slowly in a 275-degree F. oven. If too high a heat is used, the sugar caramelizes. Stir and mash it with a fork. Only enough sugar to be used at one time should be softened, as it hardens again as soon as it is cold.

To sour one cup of milk, put one tablespoon of vinegar in a cup and fill the cup with sweet milk. Stir well.

To clean silverware, mix one tablespoon soda and one tablespoon salt with one quart of water. Boil the silverware in this in an aluminum kettle until the tarnish is removed. Rinse and rub dry.

Give the baby his cod liver oil in the bath tub to avoid the brown stains on blankets and clothes that are so hard to remove.

Buttered Peas
Head Lettuce Salad

Beverage
* Recipe given

Rice Ring.

Cook 1 cup of rice in 8 cups of boiling salted water. Cook rice until tender and fluffy. Remove from boiling water and rinse well with cold water. Drain thoroughly.

1 cup parsley, chopped fine
1 onion
½ green pepper
1 cup whole milk
2 tablespoons any well-flavored cheese
4 eggs
Salt and pepper to taste

Beat egg yolks until thick, then add the milk, rice and other ingredients. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites last. Pour into a well-greased ring mold. Set in a pan of hot water and bake from 30 to 40 minutes in a 350 to 375-degree F.

oven. Or you may want to add leftover meat or fish to your rice foundation. Try one or all—you'll find the combinations tempting.

Romantic Meat Pie.

(Serves 6)

A very nutritious kind of pie is this one, with crescent biscuits riding a sea of meat, vegetables and gravy. And it's an excellent way to serve leftover meat. Almost any of the thrift cuts can be used. You'll need:

4 tablespoons fat
3 tablespoons chopped onion
2 tablespoons green pepper
½ cup diced celery
1 cup diced cooked meat
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk or meat stock
½ cup diced cooked carrots

Slowly brown onions, pepper, celery and cooked meat in cooking fat, stirring often. Add flour slowly, stirring constantly until brown. Add remaining ingredients. Heat thoroughly. Pour into well-greased baking dish and cover with baking powder biscuits which have been cut in crescent shapes. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) about 15 minutes, or until biscuits are browned.

Why not try this sweet potato leftover which is sure to be a hit with either fish, fowl or meat: Mash the potatoes and shape into ½-inch cakes. Sprinkle with flour and brown quickly in hot fat. Then serve.

Sure, it's a big problem to figure ways of using assorted flakes and bits of yesterday's meal. But, don't eye them coldly—show them the heat again. Your family will love you for it!

Ham Souffle.

2 cups scalded milk
3 tablespoons butter or other fat
3 tablespoons flour
½ cup bread crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
Buttered bread crumbs
2 cups ground cooked ham
3 eggs
Grated cheese

Make a cream sauce of milk, fat, flour and salt. Add bread crumbs and cook 3 minutes. Add ham and egg yolks and carefully fold in whites beaten until stiff. Turn into well-greased baking pan or casserole, spread top with buttered crumbs and sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake about 30 minutes in moderate oven (350 degrees F.). Serve at once.

Meals that follow holiday feasts can be made beguiling by clever use of foods left from the feasts themselves.

Salvage leftovers from the relish tray, grind or chop them, moisten with a little salad dressing and out comes a brand new sandwich filler. Spread some between hot toasted rolls or bread slices at snack time.

LUKE AND ELMER ON THAT SEA CONFERENCE

"What do you think of the eight point program?" asked Luke Twitchell of his brother Elmer.

"Well, Wilson needed 14," replied Elmer. "So you see Roosevelt took six strokes off Woodrow's game."

"And Roosevelt is playing over a much tougher course," said Luke, always the golfer.

"I'll say so," agreed Elmer. "They didn't have so many hidden greens in Wilson's time, the course didn't cover so much territory and there were fewer contestants."

"I suppose it ain't quite right to speak of a terrible war like this in terms of golf," sighed Luke.

"Why not?" snapped Elmer. "It has all the violence, bad manners, cheating and general brutality of the public links game, anyhow."

"Why meet on a battleship to frame a program for peace and brotherly love?" asked Luke, plainly puzzled.

"Dramatic suspense, color, mystery and all that," explained Elmer. "It ain't so much what you do or say in a crisis like this. It's how you put it over. That meeting had everything but sex appeal."

"All it needed was some John Powers' models," nodded Luke.

"It got across without 'em," insisted Elmer, "but I wonder they weren't used, at that. John Bull and Uncle Sam are out to fire the imagination of the world, kindle the enthusiasms of all friends of freedom and get their message into the mikes and onto the front pages everywhere. And this sea huddle did it."

"Whoever thought Churchill, number one man of the British empire, would leave London, fly to sea and hold a conference with the President of the United States in mid-ocean? And who ever thought the President of the United States could drop everything at Washington to go to sea for the same purpose?" asked Luke.

"It would even have been cut out of a movie script as too far-fetched," declared Elmer. "Get the picture! Roosevelt gets on his yacht and disappears in one of the big moments of history. His disappearance is so complete even the news-reel men can't find him. The suspense is terrific. Democrats everywhere begin to fear something has happened to him."

"And Republicans begin to fear something has not," put in Luke.

"Rumors of a conference with Churchill at sea are spread, but discredited as something that the hair tonic company would delete as incredible even if Gabriel Heatter put it in his radio broadcast," continued Elmer. "Nevertheless it turns out to be the real McCoy."

"Can you imagine the fit Hitler must have thrown when he turned aside from his Russian blitz in what he thought was one of his big moments and realized that Winston and Frankie had grabbed all the headlines?" asked Luke.

"He's still howling," said Elmer.

"What do you think of the eight points themselves?" asked Luke.

"I don't see much new," replied Elmer. "They're just Wilson's old model streamlined and with the fluid drive. But there was nothing wrong with the 14 points except that we forgot 'em too soon."

"Do you think the Roosevelt-Churchill eight points could have been improved?" asked Luke.

"I do," declared Elmer.

"By what?" asked Luke.

"By a ninth point," snapped Elmer. "A ninth point pledging Uncle Sam and John Bull not to go to sleep standing up in the middle of a bowling alley."

Flowers as Emblems

Flowers form the national emblems of many countries. There is the rose of England, the thistle of Scotland and the shamrock of Eire. The lotus blossom belongs to both Egypt and India, the fleur-de-lis to France, while Japan claims the chrysanthemum and Spain the pomegranate. The maple leaf of Canada was adopted because her soldiers used branches from this tree to camouflage their uniforms when fighting the War of 1812.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging back-ache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!
